The finest tomatoes raised in Ohio are the variety originated by Capt. J. H. Anderson, of this city, and by him named the Major Anderson, in honor of his cousin, Major Robt. Anderson, of Fort Sumter fame. This tomato is large and solid and free from the blemishes which have almost destroyed all other varieties this year.

Prof. H. G. Williams, of Lynchburg, has just published a work of about a hundred pages entitled "Outlines of Psychology." It is a brief and clear treatise, not voluminous but comprehensive. Prof. Williams has skinned the cream from more than a score of works on psychology, and gives to the teacher and student a compendium of inestimable value. In one week the first edition has been almost exhausted. This shows the value placed upon it by those competent to judge. Price only fifty cents.

Bought by the Atlas.

The additional $10,000 water works bonds offered for sale last Wednesday were bought by the Atlas National Bank, of Cincinnati, at $10.201.50.

Bids were opened from others as follows:

W. J. Hayes & Son, of Cleveland, $10,000.

Seasongood, Meyer & Co., Cincinnati $10,081.50.

Kleybolte & Son, Cincinnati, $10,087.50.

Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, $10,027.

Merchant's National Bank, Hillsboro, $10,025.

S. Kuhn & Co., Cincinnati, $10,325.

The latter bid was irregular, not being accompanied by a certified check, and exacting engraved bonds of $500 denomination.

The Atlas bought the former bonds of our city.

IN MEMORIAM.

IDALIE MAUDE COX.

During the past three months a number of ladies have met every two weeks, at the home of Mrs. J. H. Richards, to listen to illustrated talks on nursing, hygiene, etc. Miss Maude Cox was one of the most esteemed members, and gave much valuable practical instruction. At the last meeting, August 20, the following memoir was read and resolutions offered:

"Here lies one whose name was writ in water," the imperishable words which the talented author of Endymion dictated for his own epitaph may fitly be applied to her whose memorial we this day read. But, as the beautiful thoughts written by him live on through the years, so the good done by her, the kindly thoughts expressed, shall live long after the fertile brain has ceased its work. Many of the gifted early dead are among the immortals. Upon the lips that spoke so wisely and so well at the last meeting of the "Fortnightly," "life's reticence" has swiftly, unendingly fallen. Seventeen years ago I learned to know and love my pupil, Idalie Maude Cox, and through all the change since, I have watched her career with more than ordinary interest, knowing so well her capabilities.

Possessed of a refined, sensitive nature, always delicate, she was ill fitted to battle with the world's activities.

A girl of high aspirations, noble, generous impulses, sympathetic, of unusual vigorous mentality, had her physical endurance equalled her mental powers what might she not have become?

An alumnus of High School and College, and an ornament to each. Her frail figure comes before me and I hear her sweet, incisive voice in response to a toast at College Alumni Reunion, '93, saying: "No life can be pure in its purpose and strong in its strife, and all life not be better and purer thereby."

She possessed the sensitiveness about small matters that betokened a healthful conscience. Her physician says of her, "One of the most conscientious persons I ever knew."

To talk with her was inspirational. Her conversation was uplifting. The choicest in music and literature appealed to her. The ladies who were present at the first talk will remember her quoting from Emerson—"Hitch your wagon to a star."

While she was studying in Cincinnati, she sent me a beautiful poem in the measure of Hiawatha, written after hearing one of Schubert's sonatas. The music in her soul found expression in the written lines.

When out of a chasm of sorrow the benighted scope of the "Fortnightly" took shape, Miss Cox generously gave of her gifts, her time, her experience to its aid. How valuable that aid was each can testify. Only those who have been ill and have felt the comforting presence and skill of the trained nurse can fully realize the beneficence of her chosen vocation.

With her deft ladylike ways, quiet, alert, reticent, gentle manners, we can understand how well she filled her position. On that last day of the Fortnightly, could the prescient soul have felt that mortal life was touching the rim of the Infinite? So replete with hopeful, clear-cut, tersely-put, rapidly-uttered thought was that last two hours talk, her pale spirituelle face aglow with enthusiasm.

Twenty-six short years from the unfolding to the closing, when the spark that had so long been waning, in the early morn of July 31, 1894, quietly and peacefully went out.

With kindred dust she rests beyond the reach or need of human aid or human ill.

Why a life of such rare promise should so soon be ended, we do not understand.

We cannot interpret God's mysteries. We only know that he who gave taketh away. She already knows why she is yonder.

She has solved it—Life's wonderful problem. The deepest, the strangest, the last; And into the soul of the living she has passed. With the answer forever has passed.

How strange that in spite of our questioning, She match no answer nor tells, Why so soon was life's honoring laurels Dispelled by God's immortelles.

How strange she should sleep so profoundly, So young, yet so worn by the strife, While beside her, brimful of hope's nectar, Untroubled, stood the goblet of life.

Men sleep I've that when the evening Of a long weary day droppeth down, But she wrought so well, that the morning Brought for her the rest and the crown.

'Tis idle to talk of the future, Or the rare "night have been" mid our tears. God knows all about it, yet took her Away from the coming years.

God knew all about it—how noble, How gentle she was and how brave; How bright her future future, Yet put her to sleep in the grave.

God knows all about those who love her, How bitter the trial must be; And right through it all, God is loving And knows so much better than we.

MRS. BERTHA ROCKLY MATHER

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas—Our Heavenly Father, in his infinite and inscrutable wisdom, having given this useful, valued and beautiful life, has seen fit to close its existence on earth, thus early, for its full fruition in the heavenly country, therefore be it

Resolved—That our association has lost a teacher, interested, painstaking and efficient, especially prepared for the work by her successful experience in her profession as trained nurse, ever willing, and, peculiarly happy in her manner of imparting knowledge.

Resolved—That in her untimely death, her profession has lost one of its most capable and gifted members, whose gentle spirit, refined and sympathetic nature, well balanced mind, made up the character of a well rounded Christian womanhood.

Resolved—That we "with thankful hearts for such an example, bid adieu our sisterhood, and, its great kinship of humanity, to emulate and follow her."

Resolved—That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the family of the deceased.

MRS. S. E. WILLIAMS,
MRS. J. F. NELSON,
MRS. E. L. FERRIS.

In Memoriam.

Sister Isabel Hulitt was born Feb. 13, 1847 on the Hulitt home farm, the youngest of a family of nine children born to Britton C. and Elizabeth Hulitt, and died August 4, 1894, aged 47 years.

Never of robust constitution, all her affliction was borne with Christian fortitude. Her life has been one of filial and loving devotion. In all things unostentatious and of great simplicity of character.

A lifelong, consistent member of the United Brethren Church, her greatest pleasure was to walk with, and work for the Master.

Religion was her chief delight. In faith looking for redemption. Of late years, devoting much of her time and means in counteracting the influence of pernicious literature, by supplying wholesome reading matter to all within her reach, especially the young, thus sowing good seed in the heart and in the affections.

Isabel was an affectionate daughter, sister and friend, and leaves to them, and to all who were fortunate enough to know her, the heavenly benediction and priceless legacy, the example of a pure and spotless life. We will miss her, but with the Psalmist can truly say, "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of saints."

Sudden Death.

The death of Mrs. Fairley on Friday evening of last week, was quite unexpected to her own family, as well as to her friends and neighbors. She had been ailing only about twenty-four hours. The cause of her death was heart failure, which terminated the life of a remarkably contented woman, on the evening named above. The following paper, which was read during the funeral services, gives a beautiful picture of its subject.

The deceased was in her sixty-eighth year, being born in Strlingshire, Scotland, on March 18, 1827. She was married to James G. Fairley May 19, 1854, with whom she emigrated to this country the same year. Of this union seven children were born, two sons and five daughters. The two sons, with the father have long been waiting on that other shore, for the coming of the wife and mother. That meeting took place last Friday evening when Mrs. Mary Fairley breathed her last. She died without a struggle, surrounded by her three single daughters. The summons was so sharp that no time was afforded to notify the two absent married daughters that mother was dying.

The scene of her death was a fitting close to a consistent Christian life. Her death was as peaceful as her life had been. Those who had the privilege of the acquaintance of Mary Fairley, always felt it to be a benediction to be in her presence.

The Scriptures say that "godliness with contentment is great gain." That both godliness and contentment were richly the possession of the deceased was the constant observation of all who knew her. That she was ready for the change which called her home, no one doubts. Though peaceful in death and contented in life, nevertheless she was no stranger to suffering. For years the hand of disease rested heavily upon her. Yet, even in her severest trials, she was forgetful of self, and careful for the welfare and comfort of others. Hers was in no sense a life of ease, yet it was a life of pleasantness. Her life was in perfect keeping with her Christian profession, always hopeful, always cheerful and always resigned. She was from her youth a member of the Presbyterian Church, but her life, rather than her profession, gave proof of her trust in Him who doeth all things well. In the life and death of Mary Fairley the desire will naturally arise in each heart, "Let me live the life of the righteous so that my last end may be like his."

The funeral services were held at the home conducted by Rev. J. H. McKay, of Blanchester, after which the remains were interred in the cemetery at Fall Creek, followed by a large and sympathetic concourse of friends and relatives.

A Correction.

It transpires that in collecting the points for a write-up of the Second Hand Store some two weeks ago, we innocently used the name Oskamp Co., instead of Nolting, Oskamp & Company, as the parties from whom the goods on sale were supplied. The mistake was unintentional, and the Second Hand Store insists that the quality of the goods was exactly as represented. This explanation is due all parties concerned.

C. E. BELL SUES.

An Unjustifiable Outrage Upon One of Hillsboro's Most Respected Citizens.

The following telegraphic message from New York, is clipped from Monday's Commercial Gazette:

C. E. Bell, Treasurer of the C. S. Bell Co., of Hillsboro, Ohio, and Albert Wright, a retired merchant of this city, were the victims of the over zeal of Founder Bradley's police at Asbury Park. They were arrested as suspected pickpockets and kept in jail overnight without being permitted to give bonds.

They were promptly discharged the next morning when they were brought before Justice of the Peace Borden. Mr. Bell is naturally indignant at the outrage, and has retained counsel to bring suit against Founder Bradley for heavy damages. Warrants have been sworn out for the arrest of the Chief of Police of Asbury Park and others concerned in the affair. In his affidavit Mr. Bell states that he was compelled to sleep in a cell without any covering.

Miss Cora Kelly is entertaining her friend, Miss Elizabeth Holden, of Cincinnati.
